Preface	VII
Contents Overview	IX
Table of Contents	XI
List of Figures	XV
List of Tables	XVII
1 Introduction	1
1.1 Background and motivation	2
1.1.1 Practical background and relevance	2
1.1.2 Shortcomings of existing research	4
1.2 Research problem	7
1.2.1 The quest for an evolutionary understanding	7
1.2.2 Towards a capability-oriented perspective	8
1.2.3 Industry-independent comprehension	10
1.3 Research objective	12
1.3.1 Formulation of research questions	12
1.3.2 Derivation of research goals	13
1.4 Research design	14
1.4.1 Methodological approach	14
1.4.2 Research frame and setting	17
1.4.3 Research process	19
1.5 Outline of the thesis	22

2	Fundamentals of convergence and innovation	25
2.1	Convergence as a managerial issue	26
2.1.1	Multitude of definitions	27
2.1.2	Development directions in research	31
2.2	Determining the phenomenon	35
2.2.1	Antecedents and implications	36
2.2.2	Multidisciplinary pervasiveness	40
2.3	Innovative dynamics of convergence	41
2.3.1	Innovation dichotomy and cyclical behavior	43
2.3.2	Disruptions and exogenous strategic change	45
2.3.3	Impetus within the innovation dichotomy	48
3	An evolutionary perspective on convergence	51
3.1	Idiosyncratic dynamics	51
3.1.1	A retrospective setting in ICT industry developments	52
3.1.2	Evolutionary elements of technological change	54
3.2	Augmenting stages of convergent rule change	56
3.2.1	Serendipitous spill-over between knowledge bases	56
3.2.2	Technological opportunities for regime change	59
3.2.3	Application into synergy-leveraging business models	61
3.2.4	Shifting and redefining industry boundaries	62
3.2.5	A mechanism of cascading transitions	64
3.3	Coevolutionary change of strategic vectors	67
3.3.1	Classes of stage and maturity	67
3.3.2	Inflection in firm orientation	70
3.4	Patterns of endogenous transition	74
3.4.1	Self-induced competence destruction and lock-in	74
3.4.2	Opening-up of proprietary innovation mechanisms	77
3.4.3	Inertial disciplinary structures and diversifying skill sets	81
3.5	Exogenous dynamics and industrial inflections	84
3.5.1	Deconstruction of value generation mechanisms	84
3.5.2	Adapted mechanisms of vertical reorientation	91
3.5.3	Commoditization and constricted economic incentives	95
3.5.4	Competitive dynamics and convergent dominant designs	97
3.6	An integrated framework of evolutionary dynamics	100

3.6.1 Evolutionary effects within the dichotomy 100

3.6.2 Juxtaposition of observed conceptions 102

3.7 From challenge to practice 102

4 Capabilities for coevolutionary contingency 107

4.1 Aligning horizontally for developing vertically 111

4.1.1 Pioneering disruptors: explore platforms 114

4.1.2 Vertical attackers: exploit business model conflicts 115

4.1.3 Platform consolidators: search for complementarities 117

4.1.4 Reincarnating giants: complement or acquire platform 119

4.2 Orchestrating ecosystems and reciprocal incentives 122

4.2.1 Pioneering disruptors: coevolve with ecosystem . . 125

4.2.2 Vertical attackers: rule-making through rule-breaking 126

4.2.3 Platform consolidators: internalize coopetition . . . 127

4.2.4 Reincarnating giants: cold-hearted
commercialization 130

4.3 Protecting complementarity against redundancy 135

4.3.1 Pioneering disruptors: mediate and differentiate . 138

4.3.2 Vertical attackers: induce dependency or exit 139

4.3.3 Platform consolidators: complement but orchestrate 140

4.3.4 Reincarnating giants: protect incumbency 141

4.4 Reorganizing the firm for convergence 142

4.4.1 Platform consolidators: organizational exploration 145

4.4.2 Reincarnating giants: organizational exploitation . 146

4.5 Reinventing the firm for convergence 150

4.5.1 Entrant firms: harness attacker’s advantage 151

4.5.2 Established firms: rediscover assets 152

4.6 Managerial commonalities 156

4.6.1 Unraveling the big picture of customer experience 156

4.6.2 Learning the language of both worlds 158

4.6.3 Strategic duality as an intrinsic necessity 160

5 Managing through cycles of convergence 165

5.1 Deriving managerial guidelines 165

5.1.1 Pioneering disruptors: shape, build, scale 172

5.1.2 Vertical attackers: infringe, induce, achieve 173

5.1.3 Platform consolidators: search, build, grow 174

5.1.4 Reincarnating giants: search, leverage, protect . . . 175

XIV TABLE OF CONTENTS

- 5.2 Cyclical determinants of convergence 176
 - 5.2.1 Structural reiteration 177
 - 5.2.2 Distinctiveness of convergent cycles 181
- 5.3 Transfer and application of the cyclical model 185
 - 5.3.1 From retrospective to predictive 185
 - 5.3.2 NBIC as a next convergence cycle 188
 - 5.3.3 Industry-level implications 190
 - 5.3.4 Firm-level recommendations 192
- 6 Conclusions 199
 - 6.1 Discussion of results 200
 - 6.1.1 Key findings 200
 - 6.1.2 Contribution to theory 201
 - 6.1.3 Implications for practice 202
 - 6.2 Outlook 204
 - 6.2.1 Limitations of the study 204
 - 6.2.2 Further research 205
- Appendix 209
